Online Transitions - New York City's Emergency School Plan

The city of New York is implementing an emergency school plan to address the spread of COVID-19. The plan includes online learning, which is being provided through a variety of platforms. Students are accessing the online classes through their school district's website or through the New York City Department of Education's online learning portal. The plan also includes provisions for in-person learning for students who choose it, with safety measures in place to reduce the risk of transmission. The city is also working with local community organizations to provide resources and support for students and families during this time.
