FOREWORD

West-European consumers show an increasing interest for fresh fruits and vegetables outside local production periods. This goes not only for the well-known, but especially for exotic produce, of which growing quantities have been imported in recent years.

Data concerning these imports are often not or insufficiently presented in the current statistics.

Apart from a general interest in the developments of these imports, a special interest has arisen from the subcourse, "Marketing know-how for exporting exotic and out-of-season fruits and vegetables to the European Common Market", given by staff-members of the Agricultural Economics Research Institute LEI. This subcourse is part of the "International Course on Vegetable Growing", organized by the International Agricultural Centre of Wageningen.

Basic data for this publication were supplied by Produktschap voor Groenten en Fruit (R. Arron). Collection and arrangement of the data was taken care of by A. Stein.
